VI. RECORDS MANAGEMENT.

A. Introduction

1. A record of what an organization has done can be as important as the event and its aftermath. Records that describe the purpose, conditions, people, and other factors pertinent to an event are critical to any NARFE activity.

2. How records are achieved varies with the people involved and their ability to organize material, keep it for specific time periods, and purge materials periodically.

3. The primary rule on what and how records are maintained depends on the needs and resources of the organization to amass, retain, and reduce its records as appropriate. Records and the Federation's ability to store them influence the record management process in many ways.

4. Not many individuals can devote personal space to assorted boxes of files that are currently generated, yet there should be an accepted method which assures officers and committee chairs systematically file, retain, and periodically reduce their records. It is also noted that NARFE headquarters continues to digitize and store an increasing number of records, including some federation records.

5. Although variations exist, current practices indicate general acceptance in NARFE that records can be divided into three categories – Permanent Records, Three-Year Files, and One-Year Files.

6. If records are subject to change or renewal, it is only necessary to retain current records.

B. Retention and Disposal

1. Federation continuity is dependent upon complete, valid records. They are the property of the Federation. They are to be used by the officers and members and must be passed from one administration to the next. The records are the responsibility of the President. The President should be assured that all original and official documents are safeguarded. Rental of a safety deposit box could be considered for safeguarding these documents.

2. All Federation records should be reviewed annually by the President and Secretary to assure that they are current and complete. The retention period for any records not listed below should be determined locally; i.e., at the discretion of the Federation and its officers.

3. The following are guidelines for record retention and disposal:

PERMANENT RECORDS

President:

NARFE Federation Charter Chapter ZIP Code Assignments and Changes (F-46)

*Federation Constitution and Bylaws (as revised) ****

NOTES:

Usually records that support an item of income, deduction or credit must be kept for three years from the date the return is due or filed, whichever is later. Keep records that verify the organization's basis in property for as long as they are needed to figure the basis of the original or replacement property. The organization should also keep copies of any returns it has filed. They help in preparing future returns and in filing an amended return.

Small tax-exempt organizations, such as NARFE federations, that previously were not required to file returns are now required to file an electronic notice, Form 990-N, Electronic Notice (e-Postcard). Organizations that do not file will lose their tax-exempt status.
